All girls should become idol fans.

...but with
female idols,
you won't be bothered by that.

Male idols can't be in a relationship...

...while the girls support her in return...

Spending time
with an idol,
who smiles and dances for her female fans...

What
an ideal world...

OK.
LOOKS GOOD.

I'm a female otaku who supports that world.

Hinami's
major debut was announced,
and it was a big hit!

And for some reason,
people were calling me a
"master in the art of blogging."

After I started my blog, there was a sharp increase in the number of PVs
coming out.

Using the power of the Internet,

Yes, this isn't a pretty viewer

But!

I can promote nameless
girls to TV.

I may be a recluse
that never leaves the house...

RULE
NOTES
LET'S GET RID OF THOSE.

Ah...

I have to take this out.

the PC
is not working.

...but I possess
one special skill.

THIS
TO WATCH.

think about the trouble

they don't have any intention of properly supporting the lobby.

Thank

the next

I'm bored of

I possess

(Group Guidelines)

This Board is where the MillionDollBoard DM editor will come to explain the terminology that appears in MillionDoll. These are extremely subjective definitions, as at first they will differ from the real definition. We recommend that taking these definitions as a guide.

[1:1] ♦ Million Doll Wota Terminology ♦

1: Pink Ticket [Pinchike]

This term originates from how low-price tickets for middle school students are coloured pink.

It has come to refer to uncultured fans with poor manners at idol events.

Pink Tickets act based on their principle of "I want to be with (or even go out with) the idols," which is the stark opposite of veteran wotas who instead think "I want them to shine as idols." As a result, the two groups often mock each other.

Basically, it's a fight between students and old men.

2: Cyalume

Cyalumes are the glowing sticks waved during concerts to cheer on the idols.

They can also be used as an indicator of member popularity in an idol group, by seeing which colours there are the most of.

[1.2] ♦ Million Doll Wota Terminology ♦

3: Balrog Grip [Balrog-mochi]

The act of holding cyalumes in the gaps between your fingers.

Dangerous, because it is easy for them to slip and go flying.

4: Locodol [Local Idol]

An idol that is based in a certain region.

Currently, there seem to be over 250 locodols in Japan.

Truly an amazing country.

5: Overcrowding

A phenomenon that occurs at standing lives when the fans want to go right in front of the stage, resulting in the front of the audience area being packed to the point where no one can move.

Overcrowding has become a growing concern at idol events in recent years.

[1.3] ♦ Million Doll Wota Terminology ♦

6: DD

An abbreviation for "daredemo daisuki" which means "I love them all".

Refers to fans who love many idols and are not loyal to any one in particular.

Fans who truly love all idols no matter who they are, are called "ridiculously DD".

7: MIX

The technique that wotas use during the introduction or climax of a song, where they shout to the timing of the song.

It is described as "striking" with words rather than "saying" them.

The standard pattern goes: Tiger! Fire! Cyber! Fiber! Diver! Viber! Jaajaal.

It also begins with a starting order that goes "[Yo]sshal iku ze~!" (All right! Let's go~!)

On another note, before it was given the name "MIX", it was supposedly known as the "7 Conjugations for Eccentrics".
